

John Funk Duerksen

Early Educator in the Mennonite Brethren Church

by Myrna Warkentin Landis

(Information from Mrs. Erma Neufeld, Dallas, Oregon)

4 THE HERITAGE bequeathed by those who lived before us, is in their experiences, their integrity, and their loyalty to God. My grandfather, John F. Duerksen, born July 25, 1963 in Alexandertal, Russia, committed his life to teaching. Through this profession, he gave us his wisdom, his courage and his devotion which we remember and admire.

Captured in the words found in his Bible is the intense spirit guiding Grandfather's life: "My life has always been somewhat stirring and restless; I have a great desire to learn. Together with many blessings and strong bonds with God, there are many hours of my life with which I am not satisfied. Thank God, that my God can forgive sins and heal wounded hearts."

Upheaval in life, moving to new lands, seemed almost a life-style to early Mennonites and the daring forefathers of John F. Duerksen. In Holland, Prussia, Russia, and America, the Duerksen family journeyed with intent to preserve their belief in religious freedom.

The first emigration from Holland to Prussia occurred when the Spanish-Catholic influences in Holland forbade Protestant religious freedom in the lowlands of the Dutch. In reclaiming the swampy, but fertile lands of the Danzig area, the Mennonites used an intricate network of dikes and canals. Here in East Prussia the German language became common to the Mennonites and the Dutch dialect was retained in the home.

In Königsberg, Prussia, lived the great-grandfather of John F. Duerksen. Johann J. Duerksen (1772-1855), a butter, cheese, and sausage dealer, suffered great loss to Napoleon's soldiers in 1812 as they marched to Moscow, Russia. Through two hot-tempered sons, Johann and Heinrich, the family continued.

Johann, born in 1798 in Marienwei-der, East Prussia, became known as "Ol (Oil) Ohm John" because of his fame for the vegetable oils that he extracted and produced from his presses. Since these oils were more healthful in the diet than the oils from the fats of animals, the market was good. This was John F. Duerksen's grandfather.

Descendants of Heinrich Duerksen, the other son, changed the spelling of their name to "Dirksen" and it is out of this lineage that the late Senator Everett Dirksen was born. Other descendants changed the spelling to "Derksen" and "Doerksen."

Unfair taxes and compulsory military service in Prussia caused "Ol Ohm John" to look towards Russia where thousands of Mennonites were emigrating to the fertile land in the lower portion of the Ukrainian Territory. The offer of free land, religious freedom, and military exemption from the Empress (Czarina) Catherine the Great led any families to journey by foot 1,500 miles leading their horse-drawn carts.

In Russia the Mennonites built new villages along the river banks, with 13-25 houses to a village. Each house was identical, of unbaked brick with dirt floors sprinkled weekly with fresh white sand. Each family had a garden, a fruit orchard, and a wood lot. "Ol Ohn John" moved to the already established village of Alexandertal in the Gnadenfeld District near the Molotschna River in South Russia.

In this village in 1840 was born to "Ol Ohn" Duerksen, a son, Jacob J. Duerksen, father of John Funk Duerksen. Wheat raising and later wheat milling for flour became his business. All too soon he felt the heavy hand of the Russian Czar, Nicolas I, in the form of excessive taxes. Even more distressing was the fact that the Czar removed the agreement for military exemption, and Jacob's first-born son, John F. Duerksen, would be required to do four years of military service. A promise had been broken to the Mennonites, so Jacob Duerksen in 1879 felt that he should join the other families leaving Alexandertal for the Kansas plains.

All departed except John, who was denied a visa because of his military obligation. The Russian government did relent and accept forestry service in lieu of military service; however, the Mennonite Church was required to support and maintain the entire forestry project.

Grandfather, sixteen years old, forced to remain behind, felt compelled to get an education above all else. He attended the Central School of Gnadenfeldt for several years, and then from 1880-1884 was granted a scholarship by the Mennonite Brethren Church in the seminary at Halbstadt, Russia. During this time, this young man roomed and boarded with Colony Mayor and Judge David Unruh. After these years in school, Grandfather taught pedagogy at the Halbstadt institution of learning for several years, after which he went on to become a professor at the school in Andreasfeldt.

In return for the church's financial help, Grandfather preached at various congregations in isolated villages. Walking was his mode of transportation, thus he began traveling the night before so as to get to the Sunday service on time.

Once in a dark, wooded area, voices and cry for help pierced the night. Grandfather groped blindly in the dense woods trying to answer the plea, when suddenly an inner voice commanded him to stop. He sat until morning. With the early light he saw that just a few feet further he would have stepped off a steep cliff; later he learned that a man had been robbed and killed in the woods that night.

In regard to the ever-threatening military service, the Russian government had granted some leniency to John because he was a teacher and a preacher, but now his time was called again. Grandfather was anguished, for he so firmly opposed military service. He wrote, "To destroy, oppose or hinder in any way the creative progress of the loving God is a black sin for humanity to commit." Since war is an activity of destruction, Grandfather stood wholeheartedly against it and its purposes. His hope was America. The government granted him a temporary visa for visiting privileges only, but in 1887 even that was revoked; the only route was escape via Poland.

At the Polish border the guard simply stated, "If you cross, I'll have to shoot you." Determined to get to America, Grandfather with a bribe formulated, found the guard's home and spoke to his wife. If the lady could persuade her husband to let John cross, then a large ham would be hers. The next night he returned to the house and the consenting lady explained, "It's all arranged. Tomorrow night at the exact hour and minute you hide near the sentry post. My husband will make his round and as he turns around to walk to the other end, he will not look back. You have time enough before the opposite sentry comes over the hill to get across." Grandfather gave her the ham and with faith and courage followed the plan.

The plan worked to precision; he was in Poland. Then from Hamburg, Germany, to Long Island, New York, this lone emigrant crossed the ocean for a $28.00 fare. "In the year 1887, on July 1, I came to Kansas, America," John wrote.

During the first winter John Duerksen enrolled in a small one-room school near Hillsboro, Kansas, and translated the lessons of the first eight grades to learn the English language. In 1889 he took the Teachers' Institute Examination (now Emporia State College, Emporia, Kansas). Now he held a life certificate for teaching in Russia and America; in the Russian, German, and English languages.

After teaching in English several years in the Greenfield School near Hillsboro, Kansas, Grandfather felt he was more at ease with the German language. Thus he took the position of Principal at the Little River Vereinsschule, a Mennonite Brethren church school near Buhler, Kansas. John, now 33, and his bride, Katharina, lived in an apartment adjoining the school. Here his family grew to four sons and a daughter, Katharina or "Tina," who was to become my mother. Here also, Grandfather purchased a forty-acre tract of land and farmed. He stated, "I am a teacher, not a farmer, but the school teacher will never have income sufficient to support a family and lay away a bit for the future." The church paid him $30.00 a month.

In 1897 the Mennonite Brethren Conference asked Grandfather to chair a German Department at the Brethren Church College in McPherson, Kansas. Through this innovation began the first attempt of the Mennonite Brethren to set up a school for higher education in America. Professor Duerksen found this new beginning difficult for several reasons. The Spanish-American War had broken out; the school spirit also suffered greatly as students waited to see what the new venture would be like. The German Department opened its doors that fall of 1898 and Professor Duerksen enrolled one student, the late Dr. Henry W. Lohrenz, who later became the first president of Tabor College. However, in seven years the Department grew to seventy-six students. Many leaders in the Mennonite Brethren Conference and several of the pioneer missionaries received their initial training here. By 1908 the Conference felt it was now time to establish their own denominational school; thus Tabor College came into being in Hillsboro, Kansas.

John F. Duerksen, now 45, turned again to farming and bought land near Corn, Oklahoma. Immediately upon arrival he was asked to teach in the school the Corn Mennonite Brethren Church had built in 1903. With six sons and a daughter to help run the farm and home, Professor Duerksen put all his energies into the development of the school. Thus began the Washita Gemeinde Schule which offered a three-year course of secondary training and provided a course in teacher training in pedagogy and practice teaching. It was a bold venture.

VII.

In light of the above considerations, the Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee:

1. Asks our congregations to welcome back those who because of conscience violated the Selective Service Act or Military Law to avoid military service.

2. Urges our Mennonite and Brethren in Christ bodies to support a universal amnesty which without being punitive would restore all civil rights to those having refused military service for conscience sake.

3. Appeals to the United States Government to recognize the value of the witness of the men who opposed the war by restoring full civil rights with impunity to these men.

4. Commends those governments such as Canada which admitted young men who chose to leave the United States rather than fight in the Vietnam war.

This statement — A Christian Declaration on Amnesty — represents the consensus of the Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee. The document was prepared to generate honest discussion and to help to focus the moral and theological issues regarding amnesty.

Both within the Christian churches of North America and within the larger society, there is a broad diversity of thought concerning amnesty for those who would not participate in the Vietnam war. It is an issue which must be faced and ultimately resolved. The Peace Section has attempted to state with clarity and precision the position which it feels is consonant with our Mennonite theology of peacemaking and reconciling. —Walton Hackman, Executive Secretary, Peace Section, MCC

High Involvement at Ontario WMS Rally

INVOLVEMENT is one aspect of "Christianity in Action." Instead of one guest speaker, more than 15 women were involved in developing this theme at the 13th annual rally of the Ontario M. B. Women's Missionary Service held on April 14.

Mrs. John Baerg, pastor's wife of the host church, welcomed the 650 women and stated, "Christianity in action begins at the cross." Mary Dueck, lecturer in German at Waterloo Lutheran University, and reelected president of the WMS for her third year, chaired the sessions.

In her devotional talk, Katharine Redekop, receptionist and bookkeeper at Tabor Manor, St. Catharines, compared a meditative Mary with a bustling Martha. "Communion with God must precede any influence or harmony a Christian woman will bring into a home or church."

"Am I available for service wherever he leads?" was the question Marga Rempel from Kitchener asked as she presented the role of a deacon's wife. She must be willing to share her husband with the church and not to reflect negatively on his ministry. "Home is a safe place" according to Gladys Bunt whom she quoted. She stressed the need for open homes to those who may not have a secure one.

A refreshing glimpse into the flexible, independent life of a single adult was by Kay Peters, former missionary in Zaire, now counselor at Waterloo University. "More important than our status is what I am as a person . . . Foremost is my personal obedience to the Lordship of Christ when He calls 'Follow me.' Nothing can enter my life but that He wills it, shares it, bears it," she stated.

Viola Penner, student at Brock University in St. Catharines, represented the youth outlook. From her exciting experiences in Jamaica where she worked with World Vision at the Faith Home for children last summer, she said, "To put Christianity into action you must give of yourself and you will never lose. . . . I have found in my Inter-Varsity Fellowship group activity that with God one can withstand any argument. No one can deny the power of Christ in a changed life."

A mother of eleven children, Hedv Enns, won the attentive audience's admiration as she related personal assurance which God had given her in her years as a missionary's wife in Brazil. Whether faced with the unknown or separation from husband and children; adjustment to a strange culture or lack of social life; no evidence of fruit or obscurity — was she content to remain faithful in Christ's service?

The afternoon session focused on the Christian woman in the community. Marlene Derksen moderated a panel of seven women who gave personal insights into their involvement in the community.

As Nell Mathies, active in Christian women's clubs and Gideon and the Kitchener/Waterloo hospital auxiliaries, stated in her devotional, "Personal fulfillment and blessing to the volunteer in community activities far exceed any contribution. . . . The horizon of the work is just as wide as our hearts."

Thus with new inspiration and resolve the women of Ontario went home to manifest "Christianity in Action." ■

JOHN FUNK DUERKSEN

The large, white house Grandfather built in Corn was landscaped in Russian tradition with a front covered in flower gardens and a back yard teeming with fruit trees. Not only did seven children live under his roof, but also numerous boarders who were some of his students. Family rituals were deemed important, thus the entire household responded to the sharp rap on the bottom stairstep each night at 9:30 for devotions. Every meal ended with a hymn and the assumption was that each person must learn to sing and play at least one instrument.

In 1915 Grandmother died and Grandfather Duerksen resigned from teaching. Four years later he was ordained into the ministry and then in 1924 he married Gertrude Kroeker Warrentin. On May 1, 1932, Grandfather died suddenly of stomach cancer.

John Duerksen was an elected minister in the church, editor of the Mennonite Brethren Sunday school quarterlies for many years, a member of the Conference foreign mission board, and a director for Tabor College. He spent a lifetime teaching and preaching. Those who sat under his instruction remember his jovial and confident nature, his intense activity in religious work, his short but thoughtful sermons, and his methods of teaching and principles.

One of Grandfather's four teachers paraphrased these thoughts as "Success Pointers" from John F. Duerksen's thirty years' teaching experience:

1. Teaching success does not depend upon what you learn from books; but, one should continually strive to learn the book knowledge well, for it provides the tools for better living.

2. True conscientious fear of God is the beginning of wisdom.

3. A loving soft answer is the disciplinarian's strong arm that delivers a wise student from foolishness. If that fails, you know you are dealing with a foolish person and deal with him accordingly.

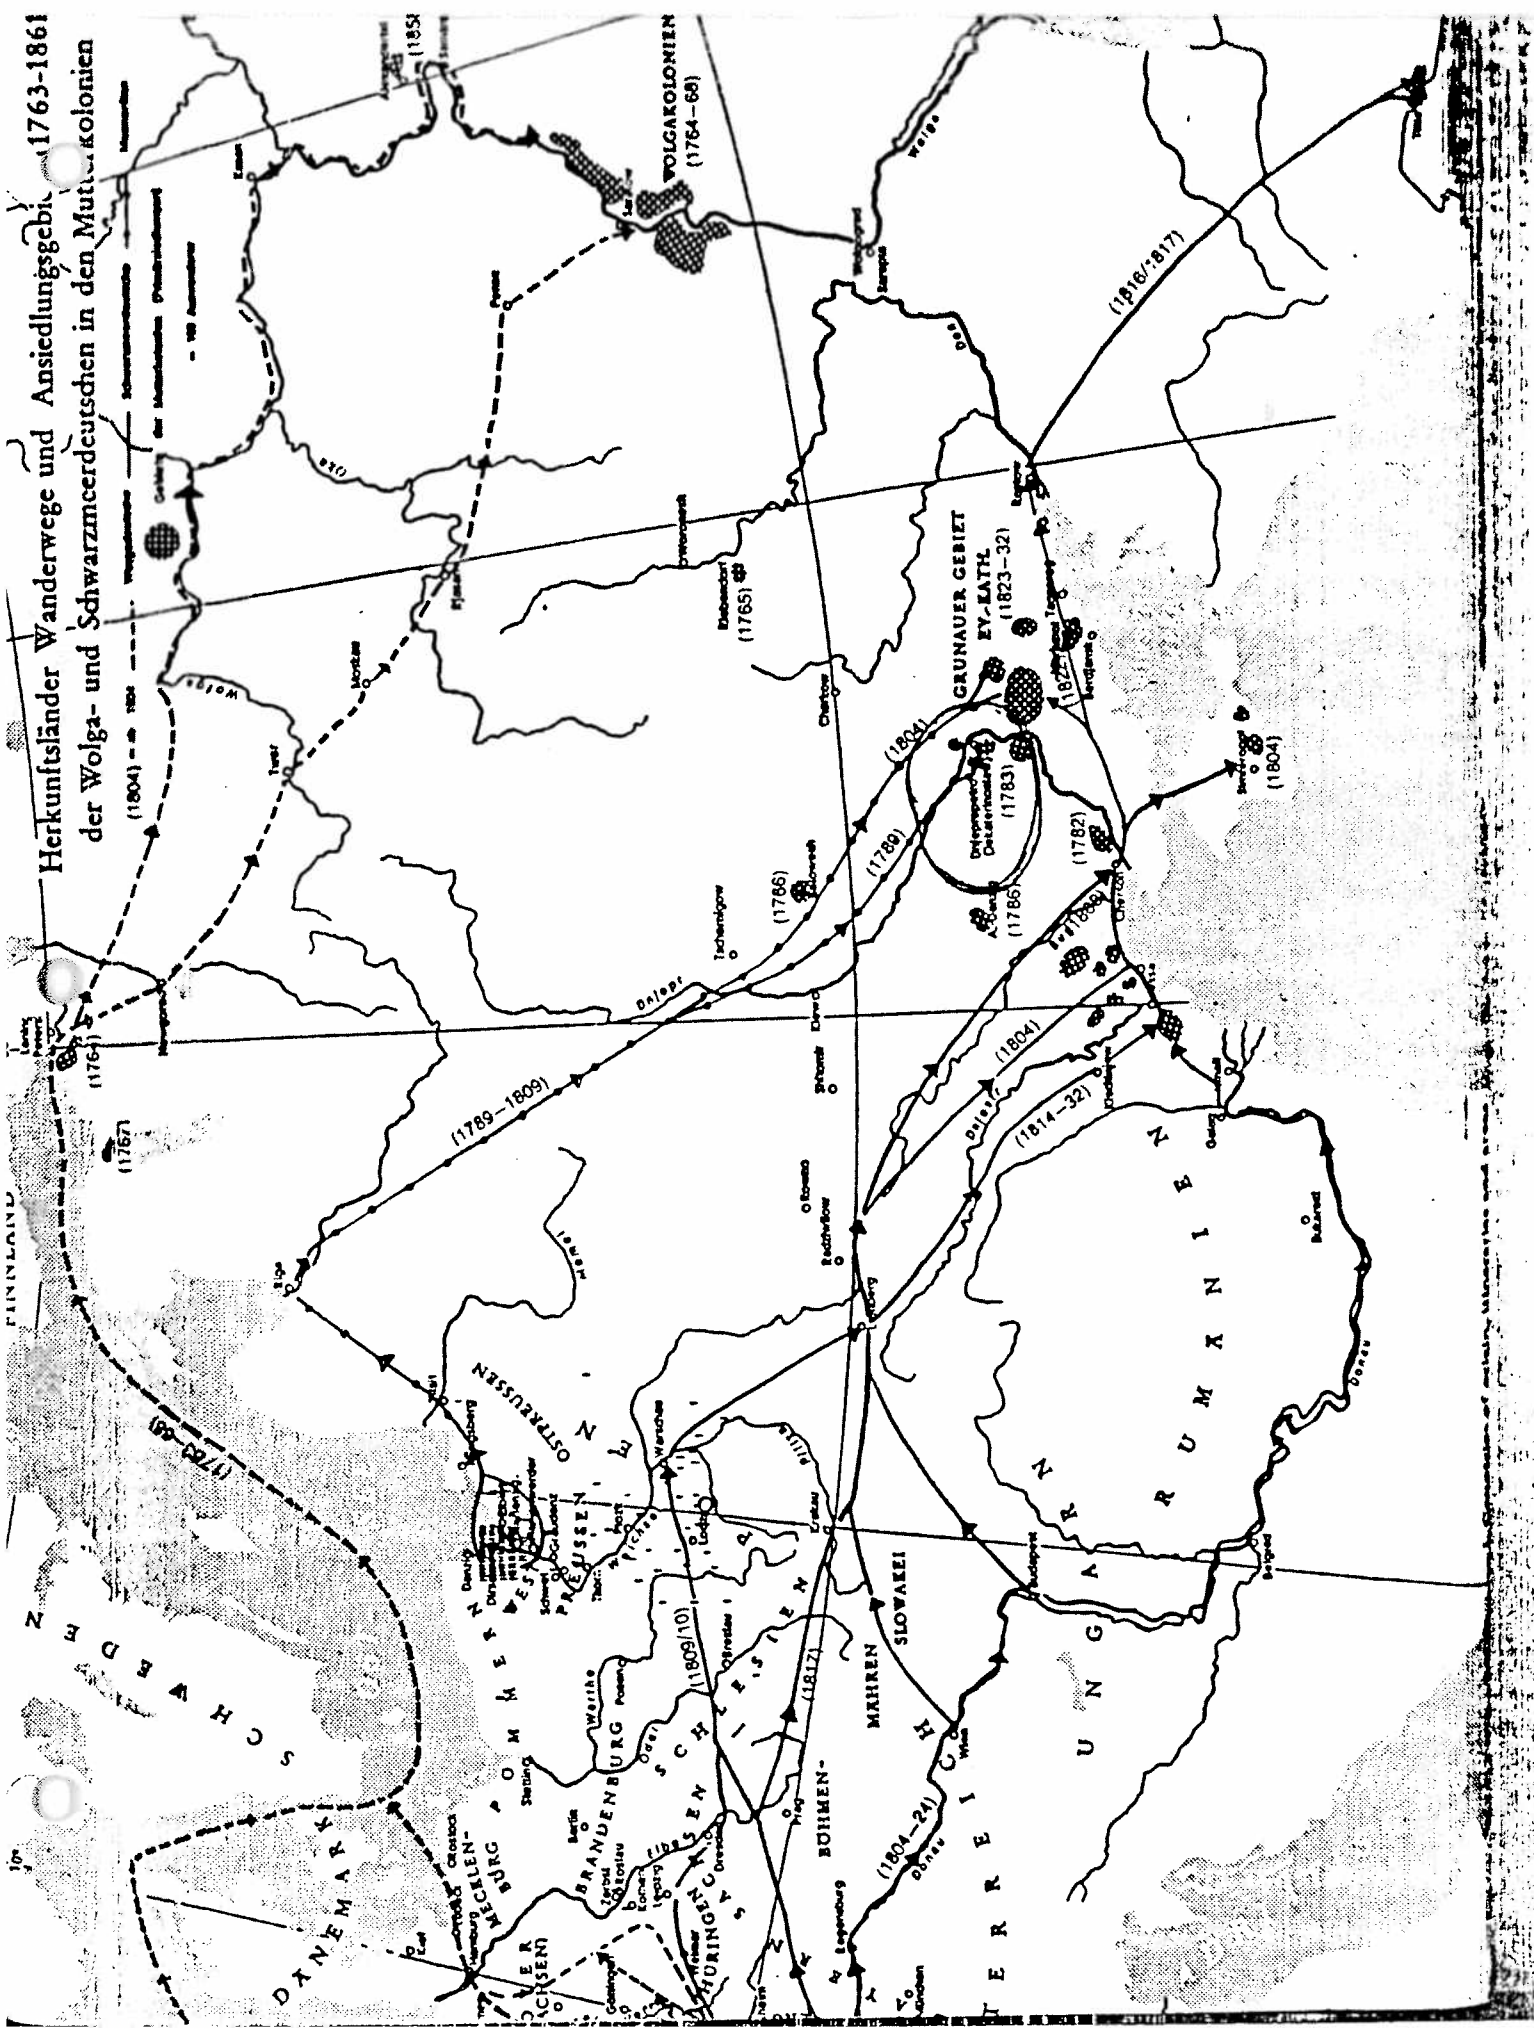

4. Personality is the greatest factor in a teacher, and this is found in the implicit faith in obeying Jesus.

5. Trust your student in your dealings even though he fails you at times. He will test you, surely; but he loves you all the more when he learns that trust is mutual.

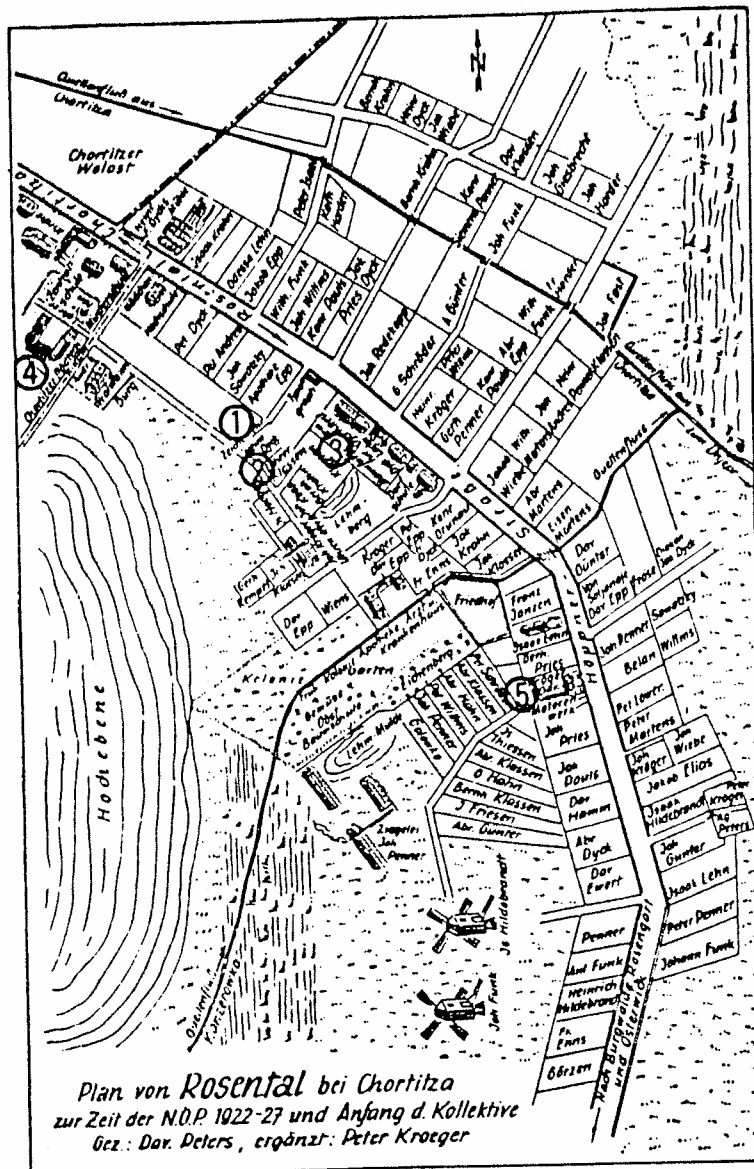

6. A truly converted teacher, filled with the faithful spirit of God, may make failures; but, in the end, he will succeed ■

He is the best teacher who follows his own instruction.
