

Dirk Jantzen *

- +Nov.25,1750

was a younger brother of elder Anthony Jantzen of the Flemish Mennonite Church of Danzig. He had been elected deacon in 1712 and into the ministry in 1719. When in 1725 the so-called Danzig Mennonite Churches of Amsterdam and Rotterdam were in need of an elder, they wrote to their brethren in West Prussia asking for help. Thus Dirck Jantzen was elected elder and went to Amsterdam, where he stayed for 8 years. After his return he served as elder in the Flemish Mennonite Church at Danzig until his death.

His second wife was Anna Buhler, a sister to elder Hans Buhler of the Grosswerder Mennonite Church. Their son was:

Cornelius Jantzen I. - lived at Alt-Schottland - suburb of Danzig.

Cornelius Janzen

As a young man Cornelius Janzen visited the Mennonite colonies in South Russia with some friends, traveling mostly on horseback. He lost his mother at the age of 10.

The date is not mentioned when he moved to Russia, but according to his bookkeeping, which seems to be very accurate, it must have happened in June of 1850. His last entry in Prussian currency was made on June 14, 1850, while the first entry with Russian currency on June 21, 1850.. Therefore we can conclude that they left Danzig before June 21st. They were accompanied by Helena's sister Anna and brother Johannes. They arrived in Berdyansk at the end of July (by carriage).

In the fall of 1852 they left Berdyansk and returned to Prussia, arriving in Danzig in November 1852. For the first part of their stay they lived with her brother Abraham von Riesen. As the Crimean war was on, they prolonged their stay till 1856.

In the summer of 1856 they came back to Berdyansk. His renter Jakob Buhler had died in 1855. Now Cornelius Janzen had to repair the damage done by the Crimean War to his buildings.

- - - -

Cornelius Janzen had been appointed as Prussian Consul in 1856, which office he held till 1862. He never became a Russian citizen. He dealt with grain, that was brought from the Molotschna, and traded mostly with England.

He came in contact with the British Consul in Berdyansk and they became good friends, also with an agent from the British and Foreign Bible Society. From these friends the Janzen family learned their first english. Some Quaker "Friends" came around (from England, and were always welcome in the Janzen home.

As rumour came that all the young men had to do some service for the government, and after investigation, found out that they were to serve in sanitation service, C. Janzen decided to leave the country. He had leaflets printed and distributed them among the Mennonites, telling them how the situation was, and urging them to leave Russia and migrate to America, where they could live according to their belief and conscience.

On Mar. 27, 1873, an officer in uniform, accompanied by a soldier, came to Cornelius Janzen to present him an "ukase" from the Czar which he read to him. It stated, that he, Cornelius Janzen and Wilhelm Loewen, Prussian subjects, who were spreading rumours and false ideas about the condition of the Mennonites in Russia and the emigration to America, were to leave the country and were prohibited from ever returning to Russia.

After reading the lengthy ukase, the officer dismissed the soldier and asked Janzen very cordially to go with him to the photographer. Janzen complied and was photographed. Afterwards he had to pay for 12 copies, which were sent to the inspections of the ~~x~~ boundaries, where they were hung up among criminals, to whom access to the Russian Empire was prohibited.

Cornelius Janzen had been given 7 days to get out of the country. After a petition, he was allowed two months to straighten out his affairs.

Into these last days in Berdyansk were crowded a number of important events. On May 4th was their silver wedding anniversary, which was attended by many visitors.

On May 26th the Janzen family bid farewell and left by Grierson steamboat to the ship "Mydridat", which was anchored about a mile from shore. The names of those leaving were: Cornelius Janzen, his wife Helene (Nee von Riesen), their children: Margarete, Peter, Anna, Johannes, Helena, Heinrich (later called Cornelius), and Mrs. Janzen's ~~x~~ sister Anna von Riesen.

From Odessa they took the train through Austria-Hungary, Poland into Germany and finally arrived in Danzig on July 14th. The following day they boarded the train and left via Berlin for Hamburg, and on July 22, they headed for England. Here they visited with friends. On July 31st, they left via Liverpool on an icean steaner for America.

They arrived in Quebec on August 10th. Taking a train, they continued their journey via Toronto to Berlin, Ontario, arriving there on August 13th. A friend of theirs (through correspondence) met them and offered them living quarters in a small house at the back of his residence. During their stay here at Jacob Y. Schantz, from August 1873 to June 1874, Cornelius Jansen (he changed his name to Jansen) accompanied by his son Peter, made several trips to the U.S.A.

(He stated that the only good that could come from his expulsion from Russia was, that it would enable him to operate from a foreign country the more energetically for his people.)

In June of 1874 they moved to Mount Pleasant, Iowa. Here their oldest daughter Margarete contacted inflammatory rheumatism and passed away on January 19, 1875. She had not been married.

On August 1874 a large group of Mennonites from the "Kleine Gemeinde" arrived and settled in Nebraska. Amongst these were, Anna and Heinrich, children of Abraham von Riesen (Mrs. Jansen's brother), who had lived with the Jansen family for a while in Russia. Peter Janzen bought also 1½ section of land near the settlement of the Kleine Gemeinde in Nebraska.

In the fall of 1874 the large Alexanderwohl congregation, 600 to 700 persons, arrived. Peter Jansen served as interpreter, and together with his father helped these newcomers to find land and get settled.

Gertrude Penner, whom Peter had met in Prussia, after they left Russia, finally arrived in a group on August 28, 1876 (love at first sight). Peter Jansen went to meet this group and specially her, and helped this group to get settled. They picked Gage County, in Nebraska for their home.

The engagement of Peter Jansen and Gertrude Penner took place on February 24, 1877, followed by the wedding on May 4th, 1877, at Beatrice, Nebraska. On the way to the ranch his "spirited span of horses" upset the vehicle and spilled both of them, but fortunately nobody was seriously hurt.

On July 18th Cornelius Jansen gave the management of the ranch into the hands of Peter and Gertrude. His brother John replaced him in 1882, when he married. By that time Peter had enough money saved to purchase his own land. The town "Jansen" was named after him. (They were raising several thousand sheep on their ranch).

In the years 1906-08 the entire KLeine Gemeinde sold out at Nebraska and moved to Meade, Kansas.

Peter Jansen was very active in Politics. In 1888 his neighbours in Jefferson County elected Peter Jansen without his knowledge, to the office of Justice of Peace. He was elected to the State Legislature representing the 34 district in the State of Nebraska, in 1898. In 1910 he was elected to the State Senate in the State of Nebraska. In the 1912 election he was defeated. He died on June 6, 1923.

The Cornelius Jansen family had moved to Beatrice, Gage County, Nebraska, in the spring of 1877.

Peter von Riesen undertook to have the main work of Menno Simons "Fundamentbuch" revised and printed several thousand copies in a 3 volume edition. There were some remarks in the book that the other confessions disagreed with. The Mennonite Elders held a conference and decided to confiscate the writings of the founder of their own church. (Some Lutherans objected to some sayings in the book.) He had to hand those books in, which was a great loss to him. Years later the Elders graciously permitted the exportation of these books to Russia.

In 1804 the parents, brothers and sisters of Peter von Riesen moved to Russia and settled in the Molotschna, later joining the "Kleine Gemeinde". All his brothers and their descendents contracted their name to Friesen. Their father Abraham used both spellings.

- Cornelius

As a young man he visited the Meun colonies in South Russia with some friends on horseback.
He had been appointed Prussian Consul in 1856, which office he held for 9 years?
ended in 1862

Cornelius Janzen lost his mother at the age of 10.

The date is not mentioned when he moved to Russia, but according to his bookkeeping, which seemed to be very accurate, it must have happened in June of 1850. His last entry in Prussian currency was made on June 14, 1850, while the first entry with Russian currency on June 21, 1850. Therefore we can conclude that they left Danzig during the week of June 14 and crossed the border into Russia before June 21. They were accompanied by Helena's sister Anna and brother Johannes. They arrived in Berdjansk at the end of July (by carriage).

In the fall of 1852 they left Berdjansk and returned to Prussia.

Nov. 18, 1852 they arrived at Danzig. For the first part they lived with her brother Abraham v. Riesen

They left Prussia in the summer of 1856. He had to repair the damage done by the Crimean war to his buildings (had rented them out to Jacob Duhon, who + 1855) he dealt with grain that was brought from the Molotschna and sold mostly to England.

He never became a Russian citizen

He came in contact and also good friends with the British Consul in Berdjansk and also with an agent from the British & Foreign Bible Society. From these the Jansen family learned their first English

C. Jansen spread leaflets urging the emigration among the Meunites.

On March 27, 1873 an officer in uniform accompanied by a soldier came to Cornelius Jansen to present him an ukase from the czar which he read them him. It stated that he, Cornelius Jansen & Wilhelm Roewer, Prussian subjects, who were spreading rumours and false ideas about the condition of the Messonites in Russia and its emigration to ~~Canada~~ America, were to leave the country and were prohibited from ever returning to Russia.

After reading the lengthy ukase, the officer dismissed the soldier and asked Jansen very cordially to go with him to the photographer Jansen complied and was photographed. Afterwards he had to pay for 12 copies, which were sent to the inspections of the boundaries, where they were hung up among criminals, to whom access to the Russian empire was prohibited.

He had been given 7 days to get out of the country. After a petition he was given 2 months to straighten out his affairs.

Into those last days in Berdiansk were crowded a number of important events. On May 4 was their silver wedding anniversary which was attended by many visitors.

On May 26 the Jansen family bid farewell and left by Snieson's steamboat to the ship "Mydriat", which was anchored about a mile from shore.

The names of those leaving were - Corn. Jansen, his wife Helene, their children Margarete, Peter, Anna, Johannes, Helina, Heinrich (later called Cornelius), & Mrs. Jansen's sister Anna von Reiser.

From Odessa they took the train through Austria-Hungary, Poland into Germany and finally Danzig on July 14th. The following day they boarded the train and left for Berlin via Hamburg and on July 22 they loaded for England. Here they visited with friends and on 31. of July they left Liverpool on an ocean steamer.

Arrived in Quebec on Aug. 10. Arrived in Toronto in the evening on the 12th. From there they left on the following day for ~~Brooklyn~~ ^{Weylin} Ontario.

Here they lived in a small house at the back of the residence of Jacob Y. Schantz ~~from~~ from Aug. 1873 to June 1874. While living here Cornelius Jansen accompanied by his son Peter made several trips to the U.S.A.

Reason for his expulsion was "he was spreading amongst the Messonite inhabitants false ideas of their condition, and persuading the Messonites to cease being Russian subjects and to emigrate to America..."

He stated that the only good that could come from it was, as it would enable him to operate from a foreign country the more energetically for his people.
