Taunte Malwintje

Taunte Malwintje doesn't know the meaning of "old" at age 88

by Agnes Wall

Neufeld

"Nie stankre soo lang aus maeajlich (We struggle as long as possible)," said Malvina Neufeld, better known as Taunte Malwintje, when I visited her for another interview for the Mennonite Mirror. When she was first interviewed she was 74; now she is 88. She was wearing a becoming blue dress on this second visit, and her slim, erect figure, her animated face and the sparkle in her eyes completely belied her age as she welcomed me into her cozy sitting room.

The purpose of the interview was to find out how it feels to be old. I had telephoned her several times but wasn't able to reach her. I began to worry. Was she ill or had she fallen and hurt herself? I called her daughter and was told that Mrs. Neufeld was away on a holiday. I hadn't expected that.

I found her to be full of enthusiasm about her bus tour of the Canadian Rockies. She showed photos she had taken, already neatly mounted in an album. "It was marvelous to see the wonderful world God has made. We went for a walk right on a glacier, as you can see on this picture. Here are photos of my second trip to Hawaii. Just look how beautiful it all was! I enjoy travel as much as ever. My husband and I always liked to go places and see things. We went on many trips by car. And nowadays many senior citizens like myself are doing things which were never done a few years ago. I think Fehr-Way Tours can take much of the credit. They're willing to go the extra mile. They provide opportunities for people to go out and see the world instead of sitting at home, bored and alone."

In my mind's eye I imagined Taunte Malwintje walking into countless homes and rousing the elderly to come out into the fresh air and take a bus tour somewhere. But it was impossible to imagine her sitting at home, bored and alone. It was obvious from our conversation that she is much beloved by her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, 52 in all, and by her many relatives and friends. It was also beautiful to realize how much she cares for them. She shares their joys; she shares their sorrows. They call her often and like to invite themselves over for a meal, asking for home-made Kjieltje (noodles) or Warenike (perogies). Taunte Malwintje is still an excellent cook. She insists on cooking and baking for Christmas when she invites all 52 of her family for dinner.

Taunte Malwintje was born in one of the Mennonite villages in the Ukraine. Her home was right at the end of the village, near a bridge over the Dnieper River. As a young girl she experienced the terrors of the First World War and the Russian Revolution with its cruel consequences. "The troops were always back and forth across the river. First it was the Reds, next it was the Whites or someone else. The bridge was destroyed and rebuilt three times. I remember we lived through a period where we didn't take our clothes off for 13 weeks. My ties with Russia were severed many years ago and I will never go back there for a visit."

She, her husband and young son emigrated to Canada in 1924. They had a difficult beginning in a new country, working on various farms. Soon the "dirty thirties" made farming next to impossible. They moved to Gardenton, where Mr. Neufeld had a job in a flourmill, bought and operated by their relatives who had been millers in Russia. They bought two and a half acres of land close to the Roseau River and built a house on it. "It was a blockhouse. The two of us did all the work ourselves. For the walls my husband bought some beams which he hammered vertically into the ground, three feet apart. Next, we fitted poplar cordwood between these beams. These were to be plastered, inside and out. The plaster was prepared by mixing clay, water, and straw. I mixed it well by walking around in it. I still remember how prickly the straw was on my bare feet. My husband was very thorough and particular, so that when the walls were done, they were very smooth, so smooth that we could wallpaper them. When we needed bricks I again prepared the clay for them by treading the mixture, which was then poured into frames my husband had made. When the clay had dried, we had strong bricks for the chimney. There was a natural spring under the house and we enlarged it into a well, so we always had clear, pure water right in the house. The house had a big kitchen, a living room and two bedrooms on the main floor. Later we built a summer kitchen and two more bedrooms upstairs. Still later, we expanded the main part of the house too."

Gardenton was mostly a Russian and Polish community. The few Mennonites living there got together for church services in one of the houses. Sometimes they were served by a visiting preacher. Mr. Neufeld taught Sunday school for many years.

Every year Taunte Malwintje still goes for a visit to her old home and is always well received. Many people there remember her. The house they built is still there too, still in use, together with the original chimney. "My husband certainly knew how to build a good chimney," she laughed. Her laugh is delightful, somewhere between a chortle and a gleeful trill.

• No plan to move again

In 1953, they moved to North Kildonan. The North Kildonan Mennonites built a new church and the Neufelds bought the old one and remodelled it into a general store with living quarters in the back. The business kept them both busy for 16 years until Mr. Neufeld retired. He died nine years ago, but Taunte Malwintje still lives in the house and has some very definite views about moving anywhere else.

"I love to live here. It's my home. I hate walking along the long corridors in the apartment houses when I go to visit my friends there. I put my name down as a possible tenant for Bethania Haus. Recently someone telephoned me about this. I said I wasn't ready to move in. They wanted to know why I had signed up for it then. I told them I did it because there should be enough names of future tenants to warrant building such a place. We need it in the community. I'm just not one who needs it."

Taunte Malwintje's house, a long, narrow, building reaches almost to the front sidewalk. It stands out from all the others on the street. I found the inside quite intriguing, especially the largest room. It used to be the room where the congregation gathered for worship when the building was a church, then it was the main part of the store. Now it's the family meeting place used for entertaining and feeding large groups of people. Along the lower part of one wall, Taunte Malwintje has mounted a series of maps. Each one depicts a part of the world which she has visited, the tour itself clearly traced with a heavy line. Above the maps, the wall is covered with formal and informal photographs of the British Royal Family. ("I still need pictures of Fergie's baby," said Taunte Malwintje.) There is a bench running the length of this wall and in front of it, long tables neatly covered by a white cloth, all ready to set for a meal. The other walls have shelves with all sorts of bric-a-brac, some of it quite old and valuable.

• Famous for quilts

Mrs. Neufeld is famous for her quilted comforters. They are filled with pure wool (none of this artificial stuff for her), which is often donated by friends. She washes the wool herself and combs it on a wool-carding machine designed and constructed by her husband. She does most of the quilting by hand, her neat even stitches following a pattern she has traced on the material. She is proud of her work as well she should be, because comforters like hers cannot be bought in any store.

She keeps a record of the quilts she has made. This record shows the date each one was made and for whom. In all, she has made over 2000 quilt comforters. Sometimes she makes a few for her family (each grandchild receives one when she or he marries), but most of her work is for sale. The earnings are donated to a worthy cause. Her main project is the Westgate Mennonite Collegiate, a school she was interested in right from its beginnings. "I helped scrub the floors when the first building on Edison Avenue was readied for occupancy and still help whenever I can. We have a thrift shop on Selkirk Avenue where I work as a volunteer. The day I go there, I usually bring some money which I made from the sale of my quilts. So far, I've made 60 comforters for this purpose. I don't put them up for sale at the shop because they would not fetch a good price there. People hear about my quilts and come to my house to buy them. I'm working on a comforter for a single bed right now. Want to come and look?"

I didn't only see it, I bought it! Taunte Malwintje has this effect on people.

• More than comfort

Besides the comforters, she has another source of income. "When I make the quilts," she said, "there are always some pieces of material left. They are new and far too good to throw away. In a year I save quite a few of these remnants. Every January I set aside a week where I sew these pieces into each apron to suit the material at hand, so all are different. I trim with edging or rickrack which I've saved from the time we had the store. They are pretty aprons (daut sennt straume Schaldaetja), nice for birthday gifts. They sell very quickly at four dollars an apron. The money goes to Westgate too. I usually make about 40 aprons every year."

"I like people. Sometimes we take folding chairs to the park and I sit down and watch the people going by. I can do this for hours. I think people are the most interesting creatures God has made. Perhaps because of my people watching I like to help them. I see there is work to be done and I do it. I enjoy it (mie jeit daut scheen)."

She is practical and direct. Instead of indulging in maudlin sentimentality, she rolls up her sleeves and gets to work. Her sensible, no nonsense approach to helping has been her philosophy of life and she is not about to give it up just because she is 88. All her life Taunte Malwintje has always done what she wanted to do. She radiates joy and contentment.

"I am a very fortunate person to have such good health. When I was a child, I had all the sicknesses children get. Perhaps that's why I'm so healthy now. I never even have a cold. I sleep well and can eat everything, though I never eat very much at a time. Even though I don't like medical check-ups, I went to see the doctor the other day. He calls me Taunte Malwintje too. He said, "Taunte Malwintje, what should I do with you? I can find nothing wrong with your health. You'll have to live a while longer so you can do more good work."

She laughed her infectious laugh. "Imagine, he wants me to live just so I can do more work! Maybe he is right. Last year I made five quilts for a lady who wanted to give them to her children for Christmas. She called me a "Wunder Gottes" (miracle of God)."

Such is Taunte Malwintje's life, always dedicated to others. She was present at the very first women's conference in Plum Coulee. She recalls there were about 40 women at this gathering. Last year she was recognized as the only woman from this original group who was still active in the organization. She can look back on many useful, fulfilling years of service to her community.

After I had concluded my interview and was already out on the sidewalk I remembered that I hadn't asked Taunte Malwintje what it was like to be old. It just hadn't occurred to me, possibly because it hadn't occurred to her either. mm
